SLAVERY, FREEDOM, AND ABOLITION IN CANADA

A Call for Papers

The study of slavery in Canada, that is the enslavement of Africans and their descendants, is under-researched, and largely marginalized within examinations of slavery in the Americas. Having said this, I recognize the pioneering work that T. Watson Smith, William Riddell, Marcel Trudel, and others have done to declare that indeed, there was slavery in Canada. Furthermore, individuals within and without the academy in Canada have worked on this topic. This call is an invitation to participate in a collection on Canadian slavery. Topics will include gender and slavery, enslaved children, slavery, race, and the economy, mercantilism and slavery, the connections with West Indian slavery, slavery and archaeology, slave ships and the Maritimes, slavery and art, universities and slavery, slavery and war, resistance, slave flight, and the law and slavery.
